The City that is hidden in the Barber's Sentence "Boss, here is a perplexing tonsororial problem, which is too hard for me to tackle!" is "Lexington."

The problem of the Bicycle Rider who rides a mile in two minutes with the wind and a mile in three minutes against the wind, bothered almost all the puzzle solvers. Most of them averaged the two times and answered that without any wind at all, the rider would go a mile in two and a half minutes. This is not correct. With no wind at all, the rider would go a mile in two minutes and twenty-four seconds. A curious thing about the replies to the Hidden City Puzzle is that although it seemed an extremely easy one, a great majority of the answers were that the hidden city

Five Cash Prizes of $1.00 are Awarded Each Week to the best, clearest, or most concise answers received, and a puzzle book to the

The puzzle books are just the thing for those who are interested in such matters, and when the other volumes which are to follow are issued, they will make the best collection of puzzles and tricks ever brought together, and as it is the only one of its kind in any other way, only the clever folks can obtain them.

I will always be pleased to hear from the young folks and to receive contributions of original puzzles, mathematical and geometrical curiosities, light romances, etc.

tion in wages, it does not mean that the reducing power will be lessened. Even if you could offer us a reduction in the cost of living, we could not see our way clear to accept it. The time will never come again when the miner will have to ask for charity. We are better now than we have ever been before. We will not only get our full return for our work, but we will get more.

turns. The reason for this was because this was the most phenomenal period of commercial activity in the world's history. But the price of labor went too far. We have reached the crest of the wave and are now slowly but surely descending on the other side. This convention has a condition to face. If Mr. Mitchell can show me that a

LEWIS IN THE ARENA.

At the afternoon session the argument was taken up again by Vice President Lewis, of the miners, who said that he would not admit that there had been a "great" increase during the past year.

At the session of the joint wage conference yesterday a committee was chosen to determine the best methods of raising a subscription fund for the benefit of the delegates to the convention to be used

In a somewhat long and forcible speech H. L. Chapman, of Ohio, gave further assurance that the operators would not expect to readjust the wages of the miners unless there was a readjustment all along the line.

ment for a reduction. The conditions of labor," he said, "depend for their success on the conditions of other industries. No industry is such a barometer as the iron industry, and you know that no manufacturer of iron can produce the manufactured material at the present cost of labor and get a new dollar for an old one. The time has come," he declared, "which the operators are met face to face by the fact that there must be lower prices."

After an argument against a reduction by William B. Wilson, Mr. Robbins and Mr. Mitchell engaged in a passage at arms. Mr. Robbins made a proposition in support of the justice of a reduction to the effect that

The operators would accept 10 per cent. of the profits of last year's income and would turn the other 30 per cent. or all excess over to the miners. Mr. Mitchell arose and said they could not, of course, think of any proposition like that, and could not, from argument so far advanced, see any just cause for a reduction.

"It depends upon who you mean by the
